16 I've taken that mid route during the winter, it can be a disaster with ice and snow. Watched over 10 trailers jackknife in Texas panhandle. Lower route is safer and will be much faster

6 tru that. the route up to flagstaff is one hell of a climb but if its dry weather the road will be fine. personally I avoid Oklahoma in the winter but its winter. let the weather be your guide fo sure!

9 Stay in the lower, warmer route. Will be faster avoiding bad weather. Driven this route a dozen times

8 Someone should make a simple printable map of DC with all the main roads, buildings and monuments listed. That way each group can decide where important muster points should be in case of group separation or cellphone failure, comms down etc.

Edit.

Something like this. https://www.google.com/search?

▼ Try to prepare assuming that you won't get any help from businesses.

Extra fuel, food, cooking materials, clothing, food, etc.

If you're gonna live in your car then try and set up a nice-ish sleeping setup beforehand. Put covers on the windows so people can't snoop. Network with other patriots for protection so you don't get robbed and for solidarity.

▼ Whew lad! Nice job avoiding those thieving toll roads. We already pay taxes for infrastructure so paying toll is a tax on a tax. Fuck that.

2 Maybe you can put out times to meet up at the caravan depending on the state we are in!

2 Leave extra time. I think the traffic from central Virginia into DC is going to be backed up big time with everyone converging on the city. During normal pre-covid rush hour it could take a few hours to get from Warrenton to DC or Fredericksburg to DC
